The Iron-Cased Frigate Warrior.

From the vard of the Thames Iron Shipbuilding Company will this day be launched, by Lady Pakington, the first armor-plated stoam frigate in the possession of Great Britain. The French have already got their mysterious Gloire affoat, about the success of which such utterly irreconcilable statements are circulated. In addition to this, they have four others so well advanced that their launch may at any time take place, and no less than ten are being burried forward toward completion. Before next Christmas, then, France will have at lesst fifteen sail of these trementious engines of warfare afloat, and England will have four—one the Warrior, to be launched this day; the Black Prince, a sister vessel to the Warrior, building at Glasgow; the Resistance, building at Mesers. Palmer's yard, near Newcastle, and Defence, at Milwell. The two first-named are 50-gun frigates of upward of 6,000 tuns, This a small set-off against the sudden stride taken by our great ally in this matter—a stride so sudden that, allowing for the exercise of every available means on our part in the way of both public and private building yards, it places the French navy in this matter at least two years absed of ours. The Russian Government are preparing their plans and schemes of prices for the construction by contract of six frigates, sister vessels to the Warrior in every particular, save in such improved details as giving the sides a much greater angle, which the experience gained during the last few months by the trial of Mr. Jones plans show, must in future be adopted with all iron ships, intended to be really invulnerable, and the first particular, and the best are those formed of strap iron with a best are those formed of strap iron with a best are those formed of simps iron with a best are those formed of simps iron with a best are those formed of simps iron with a best are those formed of simps iron with a best are those formed of simps iron with a best are those formed of simps iron with a best are those formed of simps iron with a be From The London Times, Dec. 29.

plan shows, must in rature be adopted with all iron ships, intended to be really invulnerable. According, therefore, to present appearances, England is likely to be left behind in the race by Russia, and to be distanced by France.

It is not our purpose now to discuss the comparative merits of the plans on which the English and French vessels are respectively built.—

Were it so, we think it might not be difficult to show that the superiority in this matter is asyst so great on our side as to make one vessel like the Warrior almost a match for two like La Gloire. It will be time enough to turn to such matters when we see the Warrior fairly off the stocks, and at her moorings in the river. It will be sufficient in this notice to give an outline of her enormous strength and huge dimensious, and explain the methods by which the Admiralty have overcome the difficulties that existed in constructing a really shot proof frigate. At the first outset, the idea of any iron cased vessels, whether for steam rams or frigates, found no favor with the Admiralty, and it was not till the result of French experiments as to the resistance which they offered to shot became known in England, with the additional fact that our ally had already begun to construct several such ships, that the Admiralty another iron antagonist that retained her such shorts and the centre, are faced with ewith filted with iron ribs and 20 inches of teak, exactly like the broadside of the vessel. Thus it is contended that, supposing it possible for the stem and stern to be so riddled as to contended that, supposing it possible for the stem and stern to be so riddled as to contended that, supposing it possible for the stem and stern to be so riddled as the vessel, containing 26 of the heaviest guns, would still remain as complete and impensive estable as ever—still opposing 20 inches of teak, with nearly five inches of wrought iron, to every shot.

This, however, sounds very well in theory; in practice it would, we think, be found that in such a condition, shot became known in England, with the sudi-tional fact that our ally had already begun to construct several such ships, that the Admiralty at last began to bestir themselves, though up to the present hour iron cased ships are loooked the present hour iron cased ships are loooked upon with a lenient rather than a favorable eye. Since that time, however, official opinions would appear to have undergone considerable modification, and the Admiralty have been compelled to accept much they formerly condemned; and, on the other hand, to condemn a condideal of work on which they formerly in the conditions which they formerly in the condition is not a case she might sink so much by the head as to elevate the aftermost armor-plates, which only extend 5 feet below the water-line, quite out of the water, or at least sufficiently near the surface to enable her bottom to be pierced where their protection cased. The bows—as the spot where the whole a good deal of work on which they formerly insisted. In the first design sent in to the Admiralty by the Thames Shipbuilding Company, the shape proposed for the bows of the Warrior was exactly after the outline of a swan's neck and less than eight wroughtsiron decks stretch back heres to be a symming, and thus the point of the stretch back here the symming, and thus the point of the stretch back here the symming, and thus the point of the stretch back here the symming. breast when swimming, and thus the point or beat intended to strike an enemy's vessel was the "breast," which was placed under the water-the "breast," which was placed under the waterline in the ship's bows. beek intended to atrike an enemy's reseal was the "breast," which was placed under the water-line in the ship's bows. In the Admiralty model, and of course that on which the Warrior has been built, the outline of the bows seen from the broadside forms a kind of obtuse angle and the point or "nose," as it is called, just level with the water. This peculiar shaps, however, as the concealed under a long, lale-culswiser and the water. This peculiar shaps, however, and the point or "nose," as it is called, just level with the water. John Nagle, the main deck is of iron, and cased with wood, and 7 feet shove the orlop; the upper deck is also of wrought iron, cased with wood, and 7 feet 9 inches above the main. All these decks are carried on wrought iron beams of the most powerful description, to which both decks and ribs and all are bolted as in one piece. The 'skin' of the ship, asit is termed, which covers all these ribs on the outside, is also of wrought iron, 1½ inches thick, under the bottom, to nearly 1 inch thick up to the spar deck. From five feet below the water line up to the upper deck comes, in addition to this, the grant armor of teak and iron over all. This is formed of a double casing of the ship, and the ship and the up to the spar deck. From five feet below the water line up to the upper deck comes, in addition to this, the grant armor of teak and iron over all. This is formed of a double casing of the hardest teak, 20 inches thick, with the beams laid at right angles to one and other. Over these again come the plates of iron, so as in all to case the broadside of the vessel with 20 inches of solid teak and 5 inches of the very finest wrought iron. Each armorplate is formed of scrap iron carefully welded into a slab about 16 feet long by 4 broad, and 4½ inches thick, and weighing about 12 tuns. All the plates are dovetailed at the edges into one and other, and bolted through the teak and iron other, and bolted through the teak and iron over and bolted through the teak and iron other, and bolted through the teak and iron over and bolted through the teak and iron other, and bolted through the teak and iron over and bolted through the teak and iron over and bolted through the teak and iron other, and bolted through the teak and iron over and bolted through the teak and iron other, and bolted through the teak and iron over a provided by PETER BAIN.

The plate-armor of La Gloire is reported to be formed of a peculiar kind of soft homogeneous iron, admirably adapted for resisting abot. greater alterative power as to afford an effective antidote for the diseases Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove of immense service to this large class of our afflicted fellowcitizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proven by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found of the following complaints: -

SCHOPULA AND SCHOPULOUS COMPLAINTS, ERUPTIONS AND ERUPTIVE DISEASES, ULCERS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, TUMORS, SALT RHEUM, SCALD HEAD, SYPHILIS AND SYPHILITIC AF-FECTIONS, MERCURIAL DISEASE, DROPSY, NEU-RALGIA OR TIC DOULOUREUX, DEBILITY, DYS-PEPSIA AND INDIGESTION, ERYSIPELAS, ROSE OR Sr. Anthony's Frag, and indeed the whole class of complaints arising from IMPURITY OF

This compound will be found a great promoter of health, when taken in the spring, to expel the foul humors which fester in the blood at that season of the year. By the timely expulsion of them many rankling disorders are nipped in the bud. Multitudes can, by the aid of this remedy, spare themselves from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcarous

Specific Shirting, Ticking, Toweling, Octor & Wood sores, through which the system will strive to rid itself of corruptions, if not assisted to do this through the natural channels of the body by an alterative medicine. Cleanse out the vitiated blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, or sores; cleanse it when you find it is obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Even where no particular disorder is felt, people enjoy better health, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. Keep the blood healthy, and all is well; but with this pabulum of life disordered, there can be no lasting health. Sooner or later something must go wrong, and the great machinery of life is disordered or overthrown. Sarsaparilla has, and deserves much, the reputation of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by preparations of it, partly because the drug alone has not all the virtue that is claimed for it, but more because many preparations, pretending to be concentrated extracts of it. ontain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla r any thing else.

During late years the public have been mis-led by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of Extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no curative properties whatever. Hence, bitter and painful disappointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to supply such a remedy as shall rescue the name from the load of obloquy which rests upon it. And we think we have ground for helieving it has virtues which are irresistible by the ordinary run of the diseases it is intendto cure. In order to secure their complete radication from the system, the remedy shouldhe judiciously taken according to directions on
